Historic Preservation Fund Appropriations

ACRA Position

Congress should appropriate the House-passed level for the Historic Preservation Fund for fiscal year 2022 to help states, communities and tribes protect the places that tell our nation's story.

Background

Since its establishment in the 1970s, the Historic Preservation Fund (HPF) has supported the rescue and rehabilitation of historic sites, revitalized communities, and created opportunities for economic growth.

The Fund helps the National Park Service administer heritage programs such as the National Register of Historic Places and the Historic Tax Credit Program. State and Tribal Historic Preservation Offices (S/THPOs), which also are partially supported by the HPF, are additional key players in these programs tasked with survey and inventory of America's historic resources.

Over the last four decades, the HPF has made possible the survey of millions of acres and identification of numerous cultural resources, resulting in over 95,000 listings on the National Register, provided millions of dollars for the rehabilitation of historic buildings, and leveraged more than $162 billion in private investment through the Historic Tax Credit.

Not a single dollar of HPF funding comes from federal taxpayers; funding for the HPF comes from offshore oil leases. States are required to match at least 40 percent of the funding that they receive from the HPF. Recognizing the immense economic and cultural value of historic preservation, Congress has increased funding for the HPF in recent years.

Despite these increases, the investments have not kept up with rising demand. The need for full funding of the HPF has become more critical in recent years as SHPO responsibilities have increased, new THPO offices are established, and competitive grant programs are created and expanded. The current economic crisis has only exacerbated the problem, as states seek ways to cut their own budgets, further imperiling SHPOs.

Without adequate funding, preservation offices will lack the capacity and ability to carry out programs that support management of our cultural resources, heritage preservation, and community development. Ironically, such slowdowns would end up costing jobs, which will make the budget crises worse. Federal support is vital for ending this vicious cycle.

The House-passed Interior Appropriations bill provides $155.8 million for the Fund in the upcoming fiscal year. ACRA urges Congress to approve this amount in the final bill.
